

We're Looking for an Account Manager in Clean Economy Communication

Sound Like You?

"I'm several years out of school and succeeding in a communications position with a company, agency or organization. I'm at a place in life where I want to focus on building my skills as a professional communicator while leaning into producing big results for companies advancing global sustainability. I'd like to laugh a lot as part of a hard-working, supportive team that makes work fun, even when it's a grind."

My skills and strengths include:

- Handling details and meeting deadlines.
- Being a team player who builds trust through interpersonal communication.
- Writing compelling, error-free copy that people enjoy reading.
- An interest in learning to communicate persuasively – both digitally & in-person.
- Prior media interaction, though I want to master how to work the media.
- Being a devoted student of the art of listening to a variety of personality types.

Then Check Out This Position...

We're hiring the next generation of aspiring clean economy communicators. As Account Manager, you'll combine doing the work with ensuring that it gets done. Think project execution and management. You'll develop skills in writing content in a variety of formats, build relationships with and pitching media, identify story ideas, research for the due diligence we use in designing our client success plans, and help design those plans. You'll coordinate workflows to efficiently integrate the contributions from senior team members and specialty vendors like videographers and graphic designers.

Our Firm

Our mission is to drive sustainability as a strategic partner to clean economy clients with complete communication services that expand sales, build brands and secure fair policies. We proudly say Tigercomm is the top U.S. clean economy communications firm helping companies that develop and scale solutions to the global climate crisis. As a team, we've dedicated our professional lives to helping the people who didn't get the memo declaring a clean, sustainable economy is impossible. The best of the best, people who want to be part of a fun, hard-charging team that works from our "3D Rule" – no drama, no dysfunction, no dishonesty. Instead, we're intensively focused on client success and skill building for our team members. You can see our mission and values below.

Interested in learning more about joining our team? Contact us at jobs@tigercomm.us with a cover letter, resume, and writing samples. Or visit us here to learn more.